

DIGITAL EQUIPMENT MEMORIAL SONG (derived from “Where have all the flowers gone”).

In “C” or any other key

C                    Am            F            G

Where have all the DECies gone, where are they now,

C                    Am            F            G

Where have all the badges gone, where are they now?

C                    Am            F            G

Where has all the culture gone, but we still feel pulses,

F                    C            F            G            C

We know they’re everywhere, DEC set the rules in these years.

C                    Am            F            G

We are sitting here today, eating, laughing,

C                    Am            F            G

Memories are blossoming, way from the past,

C                    Am                            F            G

Everybody brought a piece to the great remembering,

F                    C            F            G            C

Let’s sing this song today, and live the time again.

C                    Am            F            G
All the Mill's bricks have seen us, helping DEC in Growth,
C                    Am            F            G
And the Pond supported us, with a constant water flow,
C                    Am            F            G
Maynard's town had shops enough, and Rt. 117 was tough,
F            C                    F            G    C
When going home from work, it's not the same no more.

C                    Am            F            G
It is all now history, which has not been seen again,
C                    Am            F            G
Live goes on and all of us work harder now,
C                    Am            F            G
'Cause we learned that long ago, not to give up anytime,
F            C                    F            G    C
We are now really blessed, with Maynard memories.
